Galveston's Sea Wall Saves the City From Destruction

mer resorts with which the gulf coast is so thickly settled. In the history of other gulf storms it has been this type of village which suffered most from the waters. The entire gulf coast is very low and offers absolutely no protection from the storm of waves. Beautiful summer hotels and handsome cottages dot the shore and shelter thousands of carefree and happy pleasure-seekers. What their fate has been, or what it will be as the storm sweeps on, no one can tell yet.

There is no communication by wire with the island city of Galveston tonight. A schooner, torn from her berth by the wind, smashed into the span of the one bridge which connects Galveston with the mainland and severed the telegraph and telephone cables, as well as rendered unsafe the bridge. Tonight all communications with the world is by tug.

MESSAGE FROM MAYOR.
The city of Galveston sends greetings to her sister cities, the people of the United States and of the world, in that, at this hour, it has just passed through a most formidable storm, manifesting in its course some of the most violent incidents of cyclonic disturbances. Its great sea wall has completely vindicated its efficiency, and protected the city against danger from the seas, leaving such insignificant damages as are incident to all storms.

"The city's great wharves and shipping interests suffered no damage and not a life was lost."

(Signed) "LEWIS FISHER, Mayor."

Communication with outside points was resumed at 9 o'clock tonight.

WATERS ROSE RAPIDLY.

The storm which swept the gulf for twenty-four hours struck Galveston at 11 o'clock and the waters of the bay rose rapidly, backing up in the main streets, and it seemed that a great loss was imminent. Most of the damage was confined to the beach front, where bath houses and piers were swept away. Shipping was undisturbed. Warnings were sent out by the weather bureau this morning, and Galveston was prepared when the storm came.

The fury of the storm soon abated and fears of another disaster were relieved.

A heavy drowse was torn from its moorings, blown against the bridge connecting Galveston island with the mainland, and tore down the telegraph cables. Rumors were soon rife that Galveston had again been destroyed, but as soon as communication was restored the rumors were denied.

It is impossible to estimate the damage. A few buildings were blown down, and a number of warehouses flooded, ruining goods stored on the ground floor.

The storm covered the gulf coast south to Matagorda bay and to east Cameron Parish, Louisiana.

SNEAK THIEF ENTERS HOME

RESIDENCE OF W. N. ROBERTS ON NORTH BARCELONA STREET, IS ROBBED OF JEWELRY AND OTHER VALUABLES.

The residence of Wm. N. Roberts, assistant cashier of the First National bank, No. 424 North Barcelona street, was entered yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock by a sneak thief who secured several pieces of jewelry, among which was a finger ring and a stick pin.

GILCHRIST ON TAMMANY HALL

GOVERNOR EXPRESSES VIEWS ON HIS RECENT VISIT TO NEW YORK, AND TELLS OF EXPERIENCES.

Tallahassee, July 21.—Your reporter called on Governor Albert W. Gilchrist in relation to his recent trip to New York on the occasion of his address at the invitation of Tammany Hall July 5th. The following information was elicited:

While in New York, he was the guest of Tammany at the Savoy Hotel. After the speaking on Monday, a lunch was served to all the audience. Afterwards an automobile party took in Coney Island until about twelve o'clock that night. Tuesday was also spent in sightseeing. Wednesday the governor went up to West Point, arriving there about midday, attending a hop Wednesday night, dining with the superintendent Thursday, and taking tea with one of the professors Thursday night. The superintendent of the West Point band of thirty odd pieces to serenade him Thursday night.

In a conversation with Colonel Scott the governor learned something new on the subject of glanders, which he is sure will be of importance to many people in Florida. As the governor expressed it, the members of the legislature of Florida have been "afflicted" with this subject and the relief bills, growing out of the shooting of animals having glanders, for a number of years, and they will doubtless be glad to hear that there is a way of lessening the frequency of the introduction of these bills.

Colonel Scott stated that when he was out in the Philippines he had the Mullin treatment applied to a number of horses. When the reaction following the treatment, showed glanders, he separated the horses taking treatment from the other horses, and in a short time afterwards again applied the test. This second treatment in many cases was followed by no reaction, which showed that the animal had been cured.

In this state, it appears to have been the custom to shoot any animal in whose case reaction followed the first application of the Mullin treatment. Thus, according to Colonel Scott, it follows that many Florida horses have been needlessly sacrificed, since the disease can be cured by the Mullin treatment if taken in its incipency. However, when the presence of the disease is shown by sores in the animal's nose there is absolutely no cure for it. Any person having a cut or sore on the hand is liable, when handling an infected animal, to contract the disease. The death of a man from glanders is one of the most horrible deaths in the world, and there is absolutely no cure for one affected with the disease.

From glanders to women's dress it seems a "far cry," but, somehow the talk drifted from one thing to another until the latter subject (a subject, by the way, of far more interest to a woman reporter than the subject of glanders) came up for discussion.

Upon being asked if he noticed any difference in the styles of dresses worn by ladies on his travels, he stated that at one place he saw a magnificently formed woman wearing a ribbon or some such thing tied under her arms, giving the appearance of making her waist come in contact almost with her chin. At another place, much farther south, there had been introduced what, upon inquiry, was denominated "The new style." The effect of this style is to make the waist appear as though it was running in competition with the knees. In other words, one style made the waist appear to be much shorter and the other style made the waist appear to be much longer than any naturalist ever imagined it could possibly be.

The news of the probable building of a new railroad to be known as the "Quitman, Monticello and Tallahassee railway" is received here from Quitman with delight, and the Tallahassee Chamber of Commerce is ready to take up the matter from this end of the line, and co-operate in every possible way with the projectors of the road.

RALSTON'S BAND COMES TO GRIEF

IT GOES DEAD BROKE IN "THE CITY OF BEER"—OPERATED IN PENSACOLA—PECULIAR RELIGIOUS CULT FOUNDERS ON THE ROCKS OF DISSOLUTION.

Hundreds of people here remember an alleged "Salvation Army Band," which operated in Pensacola many months ago, and which was denounced by the regular Salvation army as unworthy.

This alleged Salvation Army band has come to grief, as is shown by the following dispatch from Cincinnati:

On the rocks of dissolution the "Salvation Band" struck when it landed in Cincinnati, and the wreckage of a peculiar religious cult is scattered about the city. Two of its members have been taken in charge by the juvenile court, the Associated Charities are caring for several more, one has started for home and another is being cared for by the Associated Charities.

The Salvation Band is a religious cult that started from New Orleans and worked its way to Washington to attend a religious convention. It combines music and religion in street meetings. The band is now on its home trip to New Orleans, and had as far as Cincinnati when it "went broke." Forbidden by the mayor to hold meetings on the streets, the band's exchequer ran low, and they sought shelter at the Associated Charities.

You can go to work right away in our advertising department, says C. M. Hubbard to J. H. Ralston, leader of the Salvation Band, Saturday.

No Work on Saturday. "Excuse me," said Ralston, "This is Saturday, and I am a Seventh Day Adventist. I can't work today."

That let him out. Ralston comes from Clay City, Ind., where his wife and family are still living.

Ida Carson, another member of the band, is about 38. She was a friend of the Ralston family at Clay City, where she accompanied him and Mrs. Ralston remained at home to care for the rest of the family.

At Hazard, Ky., Robert Cornet, 18, a musician, joined the band and now is anxious to return home.

Katharine Hester, 15 daughter of a farmer at Seymour, Ind., is also with the band, her musical abilities being an attraction. Her beautiful 7-year-old sister, Thelma, is another Salvation Band member, and both Thelma and Katharine are now in the hands of the juvenile court, awaiting money from their father.

Ralston may begin to chop wood at the Associated Charities. He is clad in a uniform that resembles the Salvation Army suit, but his band has no connection with the Salvation Army.

Spear.

The lion was in a terrible funk. "Dearest," he quavered, running up breathlessly. "Get ready to move at once!"

The lioness clasped her cub to her bosom. "What is it, my love?" she faltered.

All too well she knew what he meant, but the quality of hopefulness in her suggested a less gruesome alternative. "Perhaps it was a spear of some new kind of grass—no telling what Burbank has done, you know!" she urged.

"Anyway, it knows no brother—I gave the hailing sign of every order I know about, and got no response! Oh, no! let us take no chances, but fly!" implored the lion.

With that his terror communicated itself to her, and scarcely stopping to gather up their belongings they plunged yet deeper into the jungle.—Puck

WEE TRACED HER HUSBY TO JACKSONVILLE

MRS. ELLINGTON FOLLOWS HUSBAND FROM CAROLINA AND FINDS HIM—COMELY WIDOW AS AFFINITY—TWO PRETTY WOMEN AND GAY LOTHARIO IN LIMELIGHT.

Tracing her own husband by a clever bit of amateur detective work, Mrs. A. D. Ellington arrived in Jacksonville yesterday from her home at Rocky Mount, N. C., and caused the arrest of her erring spouse, living under the name of W. C. Ellington, the husband of Mrs. Fannie L. Robinson at 118 Forrest street, says the Jacksonville Metropolis.

Ellington and the woman were arrested before Justice Howell, and after a plea of guilty to the charge of living illegally as man and wife, were committed to the county jail in default of $500 bail fixed against each. Mrs. Ellington, a pretty little woman, who modestly pleads guilty to the age of 28 years, was triumphant this morning as she talked of the case, and does not show the nervousness displayed by many women under like circumstances.

Elopement Begins Story. Four years ago in August, as the pretty daughter of R. K. Young, a prosperous farmer in Vance county, North Carolina, Mrs. Ellington was the belle of the country about her home. There were many suitors for her hand, and hand, but to them all she turned a deaf ear, until handsome Arthur Ellington came and won her love.

True to the lines laid down for all truly romantic love matches, the father opposed the determination of his daughter to wed the handsome young chap, who for some reason did not appeal to the parent as to the daughter.

Just like they do in the story books the young couple ran away and were married at Kittrell, N. C., two and a half miles west of the father's home. The father refused the parental blessing and the happy young couple, unmindful of the troubles soon to come, went to Rocky Mount, where the husband was employed as a wood worker in the shops of the Atlantic Coast Line railway.

Lived Happily. Here they lived happily, although the loving young wife knew at times that her once trusted husband was showing attention to others. Then came the separation in March of this year, when he told her she must go home to her father, while he sought a day job, being tired of work at night. Feeling that everything was not right, yet still holding her faith in him, who promised to forsake all others for her, she agreed and went to the home of a friend near the farm of her father, not wishing to tell the parent, who had so far refused to forgive the runaway pair.

Here Mrs. Ellington, from whom these facts were learned, takes up the story. She sat in the parlor of the Windsor Hotel as she talked, and while she hesitated at first, fearing the odious publicity she told her story freely and with a modest frankness that in itself was evidence enough of its truth.

Mrs. Ellington Talks. "Arthur confessed to me," she said, "that he had visited the woman, with whom he is now arrested, but I forgave him and thought that he would do better. When he told me to pack up the little things we had gathered during our married life and go to my father's, while he sought new work, I obeyed him; yet, I felt that surely there must be something wrong. I did not go home, but lived for three weeks with a friend near home, until my father, hearing of the trouble, sent for me, and I went back to him, repentant and wiser than the girl who ran away against his wishes."

I received one short cold note from my husband, after I left, then knew nothing more of his movements until I began to trace him. He was a member of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, and it was through this order that I traced him to Jacksonville."

Began Investigations. Five weeks ago a letter came to me addressed to my husband from the financial secretary of the order, W. C. Cherry, notifying him that he was in arrears with his dues. Then I went to Rocky Mount and began the investigation which resulted in the finding of my husband here, living as the husband of another woman. Going to the express company's office I learned that my husband had shipped his trunk and tool chest to H. C. Spicer in Jacksonville. Mr. Spicer formerly lived in Rocky Mount and is a member of the same order with my husband. Through communication with him I learned that my husband was here, and by correspondence carried on by Mr. Cherry and Mr. Spicer it was learned that he was living with a woman, supposed to be his wife.

"Then it was that I sought legal advice and employed Attorney F. S. Sproull, of Rocky Mount. Through the police in Jacksonville I located my husband at 118 Forrest street and was informed that it would be necessary for me to come here to prosecute. This I did, as you see, and I mean to stay here until the case is settled."

TO BUILD GUNBOATS.

Victoria, B. C., July 21.—Advices were received from the steamer Shinano Maru, which arrived here yesterday, that Japa has ordered 16 river gun boats built at Osaka to operate on Korean rivers against insurgents.
